

I support all efforts that would allow a la carte options for cable subscribers. I currently pay about $60 for 'basic' service which has dozens of channels. However, I have no interest in watching at least 80% of those channels. Why should I have to pay for a product I do not use? This can't be all that difficult to implement. I think cable companies object to this proposal because they would lose money.